I am immensely pleased to endorse {Name}, my student and intern, for acceptance to a general surgery residency program this fall. My name is {Name}. I hold the position of Director of minimally invasive and Bariatric surgery and President of Medical Staff at {Hospital Name}, Illinois, United States. Therefore, in my competency as a senior surgeon, I have known {Name} for the past {Duration} months/years.

{Name} consistently performed her duties and responsibilities above the call of duty as a devoted healthcare professional. During our time together, {Name} provided service to a large number of patients. I adore her punctuality beyond all of her other qualities. She would painstakingly gather information on night-time measures, record laboratory measures, and do independent patient interviews each morning before other residents arrived. She consistently presented her patients in an orderly and precise manner during morning rounds. She paid close attention to even minute details and frequently questioned why the patients' test value patterns were odd. She had a remarkable depth of knowledge that she used to adapt to challenging clinical scenarios. I was impressed by {Name} technical prowess in the operating room and her ability to know when to join in and help and when to remain in the background and be ready. Her level of endurance matched her interest in conventional surgical procedures. I recall having her assistance in one extremely complicated operation. She was vigilant, proficient and ready to improve her repertoire of knowledge. The patient did exceptionally well, thanks to {Name} skilled assistance and calm demeanour during this treatment.

Personally, {Name} is an amiable intern who shares a good bonding with everyone around her and makes the healthcare staff and surrounding pulsating and solace. Her fellow residents frequently praised her for her independence and diligence. {Name} was not afraid to seek help because she knew when her knowledge and experience had crested. She was friendly, approachable, and impassive and showed excellent communication abilities. Everyone agreed that {Name} was an outstanding team member who frequently offered to call consultations.

Dependability and maturity are crucial in any surgical environment. {Name} has invariably displayed good judgment, punctuality, and sound priorities in her training and professional performance. I am confident she would bring these similar talents and characteristics to your facility as a full-time surgeon.
